PREFACE

For years as a beginning genealogist, I was told that the 1890 Population Census was destroyed by fire in 1921. This is the first volume in a series using alternate sources devoted to reconstruction of individuals that may have been listed on the destroyed 1890 census. Data is collected between the time periods of 1881 to 1891.

However the destruction and loss of these records was not as simple as that. This census included much more information and was surrounded with complaints and controversy. Officials from New York and Minnesota were accused of adding fraudulent names for political reasons.

The records of the 1890 census were not in the vault. At that time there was not a National Archives to house the records. Firemen trampled over volumes and poured thousands of gallons of water to extinguish the fire. The basement vault with volumes damaged by water were from the years 1830, 1840, 1880, 1900 and 1910. Most of these volumes were opened dried and salvaged. The census schedules of 1790-1820 and 1850-1870 were on a separate floor and not damaged. The 1920 census was housed in a different building.

To this day it unknown exactly what caused the fire. The cause of the fire was shrouded in rumor and speculation. The one thing that everyone agreed on was that the fire had not been burning long when it was reported by James Foster, government employee. The fire was a national disaster and drew attention to the country's paper heritage. A fire could have easily consumed the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution.

For some reason no salvage attempts were made to preserve the soaked 1890 census. There was extreme pressure from the Library of Congress, the National Genealogical Society, and the Daughters of the American Revolution to get Congress and President Hoover to try to save the 1890 census.

In May 1921 the new census director, William Stuart, arranged for the records to be returned to the census building and tried to put them in some kind of order. Not much else is clear, but in December 1932, according to the federal regulation of that time, the Chief Clerk of the Bureau of Census sent a list to the Librarian of Congress - a list of papers scheduled for destruction. Item 22 on that list was the 1890 census and the Librarian did not identify 1890 Original population schedules as a permanent record.

On February 21, 1933 Congress ordered the destruction of the 1890 census. The exact date of their destruction is unknown. Some records point to the destruction as late as 1935 and others in 1934. The one ironic note to this entire event is that the destruction of these priceless records was ordered by Congress one day before the cornerstone for the new National Archives was laid to ground. A few fragments of the 1890 census were missed by the congressional destruction order and have been microfilmed. They are from the states of Alabama, Georgia, Illinois, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, South Dakota, Texas and the District of Columbia. There are approximately 6,100 name on the fragments.

Was it because of political intrigue? Was it just simple bungling on the part of a government official? Where was the public outcry from the genealogy and historical societies? What were the reasons the 1890 census was destroyed along with the information it contained on our ancestors? Hopefully, you will find your missing ancestor with the pages of this book.

1890 GENEALOGICAL CENSUS RECONSTRUCTION

OHIO EDITION

Sherida K. Eddlemon & Patricia P. Nelson

In 1921, the 1890 Population Census was destroyed by fire. This volume continues the series using alternate sources devoted to reconstruction of individuals that may have been listed in the destroyed 1890 census. Data is collected between the time periods of 1881 to 1891. The volume is arranged alphabetically and lists where available: name, date and place of birth, date and place of death, cemetery, date of marriage, parents, county, land, and military information, plus much more valuable information. A great book for the r
